

Book of Muckross

Ooom Mucca Roose

This book was an original publication on 15th October, 2015 that revealed the first words spoken on 'The Isles' of Britain and Ireland before the arrival of The Celts and The Romans. They came directly by boat from Senegal, West Africa, possibly more than 50,000 years ago. These homos sapiens were Black. Their words became a substrate language to Gaelic and continue to survive today. Their evidence can be found in their landscapes, boats, rivers, lakes, islands, technology, mathematics, taxation, politics, music, dance, Gaelic sports, and religion on 'the isles'. They learned the precursor to the word for speed, the internet and space science from the monkey. It is the story of The Kingdom of Kerry that is not forgotten because it was never known and once embraced all 'the isles' of Britain and Ireland and may do so again. This book revealed palimpsest annals that are not available in Trinity College Dublin.

The family of the author comes from a pedigree of games keepers to Nobility and Church and is a great grandson of an English boat immigrant to Ireland during The Great Famine 1845-52. During this time many native Irish were dying, hungry and leaving the country either by deportation or desperation or both. Today, nothing has changed, and people continue to arrive and leave to remind us that 'the isles' are no longer an island.

Included in this original publication, acknowledged in a letter from the late Queen Elizabeth 2nd, and that was prior to the Brexit Referendum 23rd June, 2016; was the concept of the unique Mindset on The Isles, brought by Homos Sapiens and that differs significantly from The Continent, and how that has impacted on the inhabitants since. Understanding how and why Brexit has happened empowers the islanders to find a compromise. This book presents that opportunity.
