

North America – Progenitor of Jamestown Social Complex to Harvard Report on Racial Atonement

The history of North America and in particular the USA, share a casted shadow of broken words projected from the isles of Britain and Ireland, since the times of the late Middle-Ages. These words omitted the story of Colin's family. The classics of roman history never took foothold in this new frontiere, due to their lack of availability of learning Latin. Instead, the accessibilities of the Scriptures made biblical analogies expedient and allowed a political culture to form by the reachable Bible that might be called their 'sacred history' and the predominance of puritanism that allowed itself to become a model for their own history at the exclusion of almost everyone else.

Black America was subsumed into this initial damaged mindset algorithm of white Gaelic/English speaking culture from the isles, that is not deemed proper as being all their own from the beginning. Since the arrival of Colin's tribe from the isles, their casted shadow of damaged words and absence of stories from their tribes from Africa, brought a loss in translation and a broken algorithm, that was not a natural mutation, instead, by default it formed an obstruction for access to power for Black people, to embrace what should be really theirs too. This obfuscation and opaque white culture from the isles displaced pure Black culture from Africa to North America, so to create instead a broken story rather than a new story that should have been meant to be all theirs too in continuity. As a result of the absence of Colin's story it resulted in a sub-culture that should have been a common social forum to connect, amend and unite- together. It is theirs as much as anyone else, however invisible it may be shown to be. Unlike the words that flowed to North America from the isles, the able-bodied black men and women that travelled as slaves directly from Africa, managed by their forebears: white slave traders from the isles that once shared their heritage in Africa, never changed their understanding of their solid original mindsets from Africa, or their stories that connected them. Thus, the first Blackman in North America was initially unique to hold both the original understanding and mindset that subsequently became lost, subsumed and damaged in translation in North America through processes of racism and discrimination. This chasm can be broken by re-writing black history on The Isles and renewing their sense of belonging with the story of Colin from Africa and to demonstrate that Colin's story is in continuum today.

Confucianism never took foothold in either Europe or North America. It is wrongly assumed that Plato is significant in North America, maybe it has a sway in French speaking Canada. There is a third Philosopher that has recently taken the mantle representing a deeper ingrained obfuscated version of the mindsets of Colin's tribe and it is called Trumpism. This philosophy explains it's similarities with the broken/disjointed mindset from Colin's tribe to North America, and the similarities with the Brexit conundrum that the Conservative Party in the UK puppeteered policies through a cabinet of dissented independent privileged conspirators in the House of Commons. The results were seeds of discontent, disunity and perpetual chaos.

While 'The Isles' was suffering the intransigence of Brexit, contemporaneously across the Atlantic Ocean in USA another offshoot was sprouted achieving the presidential contest, becoming the President of America. This leadership during the election process did show a nonconventional mindset that was unique and un-parallel to anything to have happened before in US politics that was significant and many explanations have been put forward, 'why does Donald Trump achieve this extraordinary success and not another wealthy republican?'. How can a President declassify anything (security documents), simply by thinking? Many conspiracies have been put forward and not explained satisfactorily. This disbelief continues unabated until now.

The known evidence of the late mother of the ex-President Donald Trump, Mary Anne McLeod is that she was born into a poor Gaelic speaking fisherman's family in a tiny village on the 'Isles of Lewis', Scotland in 1912. When she arrived in New York as an adult her first natural fluent language was Gaelic and she had little English by then. Her native language Gaelic (language of the boat people) holds the same primal mindset as the original homo-sapiens (The Picts - bird people - from West Africa) and her maternal instinct can only be presumed initially to have impacted to her son Donald and in his upbringing that has shaped the successful man he became. Her unique maternal cognitive skills even when speaking in English to him as a baby allowed him to carry the nuances of these words everywhere and to use them appropriately for his own personal success. It should be fair to conclude that Trumpism is an original in the American world of modern politics and philosophy with its own empowering unique cognitive schema containing this damaged culture-congruent content procedures and goals that have divided America and would not have happened had history been re-written showing the story of Colin's tribe. Trumpism should be edified before it solidifies to stand with Plato and Confucius in the defined world orders of philosophy.

This return of the wheel of history today, lays bare this damaged mindset of a current disjointed official banal language, Irish (not Gaelic), promulgated by its legislated conservatoire and depository: Trinity College Dublin, and by default, English; over French from the continent of Europe, that will not subsume or reconcile to a new order of invaders, and to remind the chair of Trinity College Dublin, their responsibilities and obligations enshrined in their Royal Charter from The Crown, the need to act responsibly and to manage to change, to remedy their neglected political sclerosis and restore the integrity of both spoken languages: Gaelic and English through new stories from West Africa.

Trumpism properly should have been about the return to basics, to embrace collectively something more spiritual and godlier in relation to ourselves and include knowing how to break the perception of the- me, myself and I in the way our ancestors use to think. It should have been about the closeness to what the original words and practices were intended for use. Language is a rhythm, and that harmony must be maintained. It is not enough that we subscribe to myths and unproven scriptures or allow our social insecurities to venerate meaningless provocations. These words should speak in tongues that secure our black senses of belonging. The consciousness of the mind belongs to nothing although it may be casually dependent on the body in a contingent way. Colin's story is that body that can reunite people with their own stories and empower their tribes for their futures. Without Colin's story there will be no action to give cause or meaning to what happens next that belongs to us.

Mindsets

1	2	3	4
Piis-Eegit	Piis Ee-git	To Be	Être
Feck	Ci feck	To Be	Être
Daye daye feck	Deédeét feck	Or not to be	Ou ne pas être
Da fecker	Da fecker	That is the question	Cést lá la question
Feck it	Feck-di	(blank)	(blanc)
Kerryman	Homo Sapiens	Shakespeare	Shakespeare
21st Century	The Hunter	16th-17th	(French
	50,000 years BC	Century	Translation)

Source: Book of Muckross by: John ALLEN

Instructions to read: Please note column 2 is a direct translation of column 3. This revelation (2) is the only known oldest body of words in mankind and is a soliloquy. The Kerryman translation of homo-sapiens has proven to remain unchanged since arrival on the Isles of Britain and Ireland. Kerryman is a metaphor to mean those people in that part in southwest Ireland known as Kerry whose Kingdom once ruled the Isles of Britain and Ireland up to 50,000 years ago.

The Book of Muckross reveals that homo-sapiens played out their versions of Hamlet in their ancient times and their words and Kerryman speak remain unchanged since their original migration directly from Africa 50,000 years ago. These words existed then and now and communicated an ancient soliloquy spoken by tribal leaders when living on 'the isles' and still do in parts of Ireland. The construct of their words displays, that ancient man had a conscience and a mindset that rationalized to choose a strategy whether to fight (aaka) or surrender, and where death was a cost that formed part of that process of empowerment or to subsume being a coward.

Analyzing their syntax this homo sapiens did not listen to dwell, and acted impulsively, then their continental brethren concluding by inserting an additional line in the soliloquy thus emphasizing their primal spirit without fear and reason to hesitate.

The continental (Shakespeare) 'convulsionary immobilism', hold their breath to ponder, to hesitate, to procrastinate and pontificating an image of intangibility that gave a prominent place to Descartes 'provisional morality', stressing the imperatives of defense to national laws and customs, and 'self-improvement rather than changing the order of the world', 'we must act as man of thought, and think as man of action'. On the continent even idiots have stopped being happy.

'To do the deed', 'Feck it': is a daily mantra used in common speech throughout Ireland and broadcasted regularly by British television as in 'Father Ted' and used by Irish people world-wide in their speech pattern. This decisiveness emboldens the confidence that brings a change that becomes a success on the path that it follows.

Today, in a strange way those lands of that ancient Kingdom of Kerry continue to embrace all 'the isles', 'post Brexit'; in a rare display of solidarity and has not disappeared from the bureaucracies of the continent and chose a strategy to remake and renew a new beginning; to remain intact as a unit of islanders. The unfolding process may see all this falling into place as in history and tries to repeat what was once before a remake of a new Kingdom of Kerry and continuing to reside in Windsor.

Contemporaneously across the Atlantic Ocean another offshoot was seen to have sprouted, achieving the presidential contest becoming the President of America. This leadership during the first election process has shown a non-conventional mindset that is unique and un-parallel to anything to have happened before in US politics and that is significant, and many explanations have been put forward, 'why does Donald Trump achieve this extraordinary success and not another wealthy republican'. Many explanations have been put forward and not explained satisfactorily. These conspiracies continue unabated even after the confirmation of that election.

It is interesting to note that the late mother of the President elect Mary Anne Mc Leod, was born into a Gaelic speaking fisherman and his wife in a tiny village on the 'Isles of Lewis' in 1912. When she arrived in New York she had very little English. Her native language Gaelic (language of the boat people) holds the same mindset as homo sapiens as explained above and her maternal instinct can only have been impacted to her son Donald in his total upbringing that has shaped the successful statesman he became.

It should be fair to conclude, that 'Le Trumpiere' is an original in the world of politics and philosophy, with its own unique cognitive schema, containing culture- congruent content procedures and goals, that have already been well tested in an undocumented ancient primal time and proven to have been robust to survive to win. This source of body of language has only now been revealed that up to now had been unknown, and 'Le Trumpiere' c/o Colin, should now be seen to stand with Plato and Confucius in the world orders of philosophy.